

Adam Calvert Bentley and Ardgowan Antiques

Call +44 7545 220052

Bronze Cluster Column Lamp attributed to Thomas Messenger

A fine William IV bronze lamp base with cluster column support raised on a stepped octagonal plinth base with gothic arched panels and supporting a scrolling double bulb holder below the spherical finial.

SKU: C2664

Depth: 16 cm (6.25 inches)

Height: 75 cm (29.5 inches) at lowest level. 83cm at highest

Width: 16 cm (6.25 inches)

Year: English. Circa 1835

The firm Thomas Messenger (1767-1832), began in 1797 with Thomas Phipson was to become the most important manufacturer of oil and gas lighting of the 19th-century. Listed initially as: "Brass Founders, Manufacturers of Church Candlesticks, Patent Lamps, Etc." their successors were to survive into the 1920s. Their partnership lasted until 1823, the year after they opened a London office at 21 Grenville Street, Hatton Garden. For the next two years Thomas Messenger is listed in London city directories alone and then in 1828 with his son Samuel as "Thomas Messenger and Son" at the same address. After Thomas' death in 1832, the firm became known as "Thomas Messenger and Sons" continuing at Hatton Garden, London and Broad Street, Birmingham into the 1860s.